Blog Posting: Access to EU Company Data Is Very Poor

21 Jun 2012

Blog posting by Chris Taggart

Two months ago, OpenCorporates published our ground-breaking report on access to company data in Open Government Partnership countries. Following this, Neelie Kroes, the EU Vice-President in charge the Digital Agenda, including open data, tweeted about the report, noting that the 15 EU countries in the OGP didn't give open access to company data, and wondering how the others performed. Well, Commissioner Kroes, we've answered that question, scoring all 27 EU countries on access to company data, just in time for the EU Digital Agenda Assembly, tomorrow in Brussels. And the results are not good.
